Scandal: Rush Limbaugh Calls Paycheck Fairness A Hoax
Rush Limbaugh on Tuesday called the concept of "paycheck fairness" a "hoax." "Today's radio is becoming radically lefty," he said on his broadcast. "The leftist media is telling you that there is now a new progressive cause called paycheck fairness." Limbaugh went on to cite a number of different federal programs that give money to low-income Americans, including "food stamps," "temporary assistance," and "child care assistance." "But wait a minute, in a number of cases it's the government spending money to give you money," he said. "What the hell is that?" Limbaugh then cited a report released earlier in the day, from the Bureau of Labor Statistics, on the average hourly wage. He noted that if "you make [$30,000] a year, and if you're not married, that's not even enough to support a family of four." "So the media today is full of headlines and stories that they're sending you the message that 'If you're making $30,000, you are not poor,'" he said. "The media says to the American people, 'You're making too much money. You don't need a raise. Why should you get a raise? We're going to give you some free money.'" But the real scam, Limbaugh said, is "it is an attack on the family. And there are families who have two parents, and they're raising children. And yet, because you are making more than $30,000 a year, the whole notion of paycheck fairness, you're not entitled to make as much money as your husband ca3bfb1094
