If you have any questions, please see the A Key to the Gate FAQ. - wins first Ashes as cricket's most entertaining bowler AUSTRALIA have won the fourth cricket Ashes series in England for the first time since 1981 to claim the greatest sporting prize for the first time since 1954. David

Warner and Glenn Maxwell split to win the first and second tests in England after England captain Alastair Cook's three-headed monster of the left-arm orthodox Abbott, Broad and Woakes failed to even approach the dizzy heights of Bradman's five hat-tricks in England. The blustery winds of a wintry English summer and magnificent home pitches that proved notorious for the hoppy dead balls of the 1980s and 90s were just some of the factors that played a key role in England's miserly 0-176 at The Oval. However, Australia's batsmen of recent vintage delivered what was otherwise a third-innings masterclass as Glenn Maxwell, as well as Vines, the Aussie left-arm joker, and the Old Man of 33 Steve Smith belted the bowlers for plenty of boundaries and runs. And what Ponting's men had lacked was the collapse of their attack after it reached the extraordinary heights of 224-4. You can't really blame them after Cook's 73 and Steve O'Keefe's five-wicket haul. When Broad departed in the 38th over with the score at 223-4, any faint hope of an England victory was dispelled and Australia had gained a very remarkable victory. The better side won and that's been the story of the Ashes series — except for those moments when Australia unexpectedly lost, which they have done often enough this summer. In the previous three series, England had fielded a combination of Broad, Anderson, O'Keefe and the unproven Woakes while Australia had enjoyed the services of Glenn Maxwell, Smith and Warner. This time England went with two of the latter trio, although limited-overs captain O'Keefe made his Test debut, a position none of the Australian bowlers had occupied since it became a dry skype.gamesmaster520Menu SPX A day when I wake up around 8.30 AM and it's windy and rainy, I am in a strange mood to make my way to the market. It's a Sunday and no market at all, only a very slow and untidy queue of people heading for the fruit and veg at the Pudu market. It takes me 30 minutes to get to the fruit and veg section, I pass by the dress sale and the camson and marigold for export, and suddenly I find myself at the clothing section. I put my school bag down and buy a white blouse. The sales girls help me choose the fabric and patiently sit with me explaining how it should be worn, fasten and what the embellishments look like. I leave the clothing section an hour later with my new blouse safely hidden in my bag and look at all the shiny raincoats sold out. The stallholders have been busy for a long time and a sizable queue of people are waiting for the raincoats to be opened up. I buy a black raincoat - the one I like least
