Player models and animation has been a big focus in FIFA the last couple of years. While the off-the-ball actions have been improved, the on-ball actions and tactics for various actions hasn't been all that impressive. Due to the high level of competition in the real game, the pace of play is just too fast, and the ball passes them by too quickly. With the introduction of "HyperMotion Technology," the player models and animations are all improved for better on-the-ball actions. The new gameplay additions and improvements include: HyperSpeed Tackle Jumpers Vertical Awareness (UTVS) Goalscoring Shot Impact Keeper Plays and Swinging Kicks Dynamic Timing Player Breakdowns Team Tactics MultiPlayer While PlayStation 4 will get all the features for the former PlayStation 3 game, Xbox One will only get the game for free if the player previously bought the FIFA 13 Ultimate Edition. The update was demoed at the Microsoft Gamescom earlier this year, and today the full update was announced. The Update is available now in all regions that includes the new "HyperMotion Technology," which lets players make sharper, more precise, on-the-ball touches to shot, pass, dribble, dribble cross the ball, and more. Fans that pre-purchase FIFA 22 now will also get one of the new Ultimate Team Legends kits. Those kits are from some of the best players to ever play the game. Group Therapy for the Elderly (HAGT-E): a randomized controlled trial of a new group intervention for elderly problem drinkers. This randomized controlled trial explored the efficacy of a new, group intervention for elderly problem drinkers. A total of 149 patients aged 70 years and older were recruited from health care facilities in the United Kingdom. Four groups of patients were randomly allocated to: (1) the group intervention (HAGT-E); (2) the group intervention plus additional follow-up support after the end of HAGT-E; (3) the control condition (motivational interviewing); and (4) the control condition plus additional follow-up support after the end of the motivational interviewing group. Alcohol consumption and related problems were assessed prior to HAGT-E and at 6 and 12 month follow-up. There was a significant reduction in alcohol consumption in the HAGT-E group at 6
