Photoshop can be a great tool for beginners who want to experiment with their graphics and learn how to use it as a tool. If you're really good with Photoshop, then you'll probably find that you don't need this book. ## Getting Familiar With Photoshop Photoshop CS6 and earlier versions are available for free download. This book assumes that you're using Photoshop CS6 or Photoshop CC, the latest version, unless otherwise noted. If you're an old hand with Photoshop, keep in mind that the newest features are not always that exciting to people who are familiar with these features. When you first start out, keep your images relatively simple. Photoshop is for professionals, so don't complicate your first projects with complicated features. The menus of Photoshop are fairly self-explanatory. They're organized into such categories as layers, where you place the items, the tools, the commands, and the properties, and selections, which are similar to layers but for areas that you select instead of items. Shopping 101: Going Digital At some point in your photography career, you'll likely need a digital SLR camera to take photos. Digital cameras are nice, but they're also expensive to buy and expensive to maintain. All the additional equipment you need to take great photos, including a tripod, sliders, and remote shutter release, just makes sense to invest in a good-quality DSLR. If you look at the cheapest DSLRs, you see that they're more than you paid for that high-end Rebel T6i ($850 new) or a $1,000 Canon T4i body and $1,200 24-105mm f/4.0 L lens. The only major difference between an entry-level and high-end DSLR is the price, so you can safely assume that the better you like your photos, the more money you'll spend. If you want to take great photos, you want to be able to hand-hold your camera to eliminate shake and prevent blurry images, and the best way to achieve this is to get a tripod and support it with stands for your camera. Just look at the many photography stores online, such as B&H Photo Video and Adorama.com (which actually has cameras cheaper than B&H because they bulk-buy from manufacturers), and you'll see that all of them specialize in tripod stands and camera accessories. (Check out Chapter 16 for more info on photography equipment.)

The present invention relates to a system for the disposal of sewage-containing waste products. More particularly, the present invention relates to a system for the disposal of sewage-containing waste products of human urine and feces (hereinafter collectively referred to as "human waste") through recirculating the human waste through a publicly accessible system of settling tanks and disinfecting the waste before discharging it from the system. The disposal of human waste is currently a major problem in most cities and regions of the United States and other countries throughout the world. In some communities, the problem is so great that landfills are being filled up to overflowing and the water in these landfills is becoming undrinkable. To date, no system has been developed to enable an entire community to reuse human waste product, while at the same time being legally acceptable. Thus, an ongoing need exists for a system that is capable of utilizing human waste product in a manner that will alleviate the aforementioned problems while meeting the legal requirements of human waste disposal as set forth by the federal and state governments. Why I've chosen to drop my affiliation with Wakefield - zh415 ===== hastes Sounds like a call for some new famous scientists to reinvent the wheel, even though DNA testing is nearly 50 years old and there are numerous researchers working in the field. Settle back with your popcorn and light bulb while I refute each of your three paragraphs. 1\ "I also don't use the term "ocean terraformers" to describe people associated with geomicrobiology or carbon sequestration." Right, because we just call them geomicrobiologists. 2\ "They also have the potential to contaminate our water supply." False. I'm sure you were told this many times. 3\ "If you're also asserting that scientists are not doing research to reinvent the wheel, I ask you this: where are the wheels?" Where indeed. ~~~ chippy I think the third point was because of the point about reusing parts of junkweight art. And may I add, not all DNA tests are to be done
