Enteropathogenic Escherichia coli induces apoptotic cell death through caspase-3 independent pathway and the death receptors apoptosis pathway. Enteropathogenic Escherichia coli (EPEC) causes attaching and effacing lesions on epithelial cells and characteristic cytotoxic damage. Many studies have been reported that the pore-forming toxin (Vero) and the combination of the B subunit of the F1 fragment, NleE, and NleD, which is secreted by EPEC, induced both necrotic and apoptotic death in vitro and in vivo. However, the mechanism of EPEC-induced apoptosis is not fully understood. In the present study, we assessed whether caspase-dependent pathway induced apoptotic cell death in human colon cancer cells in vitro. We found EPEC-induced apoptotic cell death was essentially associated with DNA fragmentation, down-regulation of Bcl-2 and caspase-3 activation followed by activation of Poly(ADP-ribose) polymerase cleavage. On the other hand, the dramatic cellular events like formation of apoptotic body, characteristic surface change and caspase-3 activation were observed in Vero toxin (VT)-treated human colon cancer cells as an in vitro model of EPEC-induced apoptosis. Also, we examined whether death receptors, DR3, DR4 and DR5, were involved in EPEC-induced apoptosis. We found that EPEC did not induce apoptosis in DR3

What a boy needs to be able to do in order to be an adult. "I'm sorry. I should have called you when I checked on our deposits. I forgot that we didn't have a cell phone. I should have known that I hadn't waited long enough." "I'm sorry. I don't know what to tell you." "I forgot to tell you that it was the fifth of the month." "Really? I didn't know." "I'm so sorry I forgot to ask." "It's okay. It happens all the time. It's not your fault. You have a lot on your plate." There have been many comments and stories shared by writers about their pen pal experience. Yet there are still plenty of authors who don't know or care how to maintain a correspondence without missing the deadline. Maybe a few of them are "bad writers" and need a good amount of help. But most of them, including the majority of published authors, are ordinary people who just haven't learned it yet. The author needs to be careful when choosing a pen pal. For a good relationship, the ones who are not good in a room, home, car, or every place they step, should not be chosen. You can easily become anyone's victim, no matter how they intend to abuse you. These peoplenare molesters, thieves, and more. Don't be a good person in the room, a helper in the home, or a do-it-all employee on your company premises. I asked my last early six-figure author friend—whom I hired to do the best job at what he could—what he felt was the most important goal for his new clients. Only a handful of Cybermen left, they were killed off in the classic 'Inferno' in The Wheel in Space, so returning to the series following the Seventh Doctor's regeneration is an amazing way to bring back a
