What's new in The Hunger Games 360:

Games is a 2012 American 3-D post-apocalyptic science fiction film, a prequel to the 2010 film The Hunger Games. It is the first film of The Hunger Games film series and also the first film in a trilogy. The film was directed by Gary Ross, from a screenplay written by Peter Roth and Maria Shannon based on the first novel in The Hunger Games trilogy, Catching Fire. The film features an ensemble cast that includes Jennifer Lawrence, Josh Hutcherson, Liam Hemsworth, Woody Harrelson, Elizabeth Banks, Philip Seymour Hoffman, Stanley Tucci, Ray Park, Donald Sutherland, Wes Bentley, Jena Malone, and Woody Harrelson. The film is made in the 2.40:1 format of North American theaters, and in 65,901 theaters for the Thanksgiving date. Lionsgate will release the film on March 23, 2012 in the United States and in Canada. It is distributed by Summit Entertainment. Catching Fire started out as a novel written in 2007 by Suzanne Collins, who wrote the first book in the Hunger Games trilogy. The film deals with the fictional Hunger Games, a stark competition held annually by the tyrannical Capitol to determine the only two tributes, and their male and female friends, to fight to the death. Though the fighting has gone out of their systems, Katniss and Peeta still risk their lives through the games despite the warnings of survival and the needs of Peeta's family. The film begins a year before the original books, and includes more scenes of Katniss' training as a tribute, which begins with a hoverboard ride. The game features many of the recurring themes of the Hunger Games franchise, including cannibalism, heroism, loyalty, truth, revenge, sacrifice, survival, and tribunals. The film received positive reviews, with praise for the acting and cinematography. It grossed $425.1 million worldwide against a $75 million budget. Plot summary Introduction At a feast, President Snow convinces the citizens of the Capitol to choose two children from District 12, a rural area of Appalachia, to compete in a brutal ritual, called the Hunger Games, where tributes must

Long unappreciated as a restaurant, Monday at Nö-Ye have been a shopping day. That's because a part of the Houston Press Food Hall is host to a three-day pop-up drinking wonderland, where high-end wines from California just got cheaper for customers who drink at The Press. According to the website for the Tex-Mex-themed drinking experience, which debuted last summer at the Press Food Hall, Monday through Wednesdays, local restaurants serve up a $12 punch made up of drinks designed by East Texas restaurants. We stopped in to the first day of The North's Monday homage to West Coast wines. It was also the first day to nab a spot at a counter, giving us the best possible view of the communal table, and a front window into some of the tapestry styles in local restaurants. We started off the day with a tasting menu-sized selection of Pommeau, a sangria-inspired cocktail set to a playlist of Bizet and Haydn by local bargoer Christopher Chandler of Primary Mates. The cocktail is made up of a lush spiced pear pommeau infused with Scotch, Carpano, a California orange juice, and tequila. The palate-cleanser was fluffy and slightly sweet, with just the right effervescence and unctuousness that balance the merlot sparkling wine. It's just one of dozens of new drinks that have been popping up at Nö-Ye — something that local restaurateurs Ruben and Kathi Martinez want to continue in 2017. The two owns the Press Food Hall, but their obviously contain several of the best concepts for unique drinking experiences in Houston. (Future plans for Nö-Ye include the opening of a full restaurant in the area.) The Tex-Mex motto on the door is not a mistake — it's a wink to north-of-the-border social experimentation. "Mexican restaurants have come up with many new drinks," Kathi said. "But we wanted to create a drink that was traditional
