The Canadian preventive health care sector is more than 150 years old, and has been growing since the first Medicare health plan (Medicare: a federal health insurance program begun in 1954) was introduced to provide hospital and drug benefits to low-income Canadians. The accreditation and regulation system first set up to ensure the quality of this sector has since been expanded, and today a preventive health policy, practice, and research system has been set up to promote and achieve public health. It has been widely recognized, and through a variety of planning, research, program, and policy activities has achieved substantial success.WWE Stars: The Future Of The Company 0cc13bf012

Further, opportunities to train physicians in these areas continue to expand. In this proposal, we will integrate a training program that has been under way for many years, with new faculty and new opportunities, to achieve a significant increase in the applicant pool for research career awards. Because recent efforts have resulted in increased interest by many potential faculty, we are proposing 4 postdoctoral training slots. Each trainee would be jointly mentored by a clinical and research faculty mentor, each of whom would advise the trainee regarding career options in research in health policy and health services research, as well as general training needs and career advice. Trainees would be expected to develop a program of their own individual research project (independent study), which would be submitted for further consideration as an independent research grant proposal and for possible R-series funding. We will further integrate the 2 existing postdoctoral training programs, the UW/Fred Hutchinson Cancer Research Center and the University of Washington/Department of Veterans Affairs, to strengthen the existing program in health policy and health services research, and to create a pool of qualified research faculty with particular expertise in the areas of health policy and health services research, in particular those with health care management and organization training, as well as needs related to pediatric/family care. The research training and mentoring program is designed to encourage trainees to develop as independent researchers. To further enhance this aim, trainees will have a joint mentoring team throughout the program and will be encouraged to design a research project based on their own research interests. Those who ultimately seek an independent research grant will be encouraged to develop a program of research
