I love your whimsical style. Your cat is so sweet looking and for the most part look so real. Your art was so much fun to make as I was very nostalgic with your theme. Such an emotional and creative end to the year...I hope you had a great time. I love this piece so much! My niece, Helen, has a blue eyed pomsky named Polly. We have a lot of fun painting and I adore your pieces with the pomys - I'm always searching for new pomys :) This is such a gorgeous composition! I love how you've managed to capture the colour and movement of this beautiful dog. The colour and balance of the light is so lovely and adds to the almost dream-like quality of the image. It reminds me a bit of Mabel...Q: Extending a JavaScript function for each array

What's new:

Work, from a business perspective, is often woefully misunderstood - most of the time it's portrayed as a place for packing emperors in casual brown-coats and toiling away in a dreary hamster cage for someone else. This is far from the truth, as professionals are only so lucky as to be in the spotlight as they try to take over the world with a lucky few of the most explosive ideas and innovative concepts. This is how the business world works, and to succeed in an industry is to succeed at something rather unique. What we require most of all is passion and the motivation to succeed in a field that many dream about, but very few get close to. You must have passion, energy and excitement - as if you were going home with gold after the draw. From a business perspective, a lot of success requires a very good implementation of tools and technologies to achieve the necessary objectives - it's no surprise that businesses can be very specific in their jargon. A lot of business buzz-words are thrown around that focus on the wrong things, so we need to drill deep into the concepts. Let me give you a bit of a reality check: What makes a business really successful? The real criteria is the customer experience. All you have is a bunch of income statements and balance sheets - no one ever asks what the hell all of these numbers mean. When the customer steps inside your store and feels it is comfortable, then all of this data suddenly comes to life and becomes useful. Until then, you are probably seeing "income" not "customer" numbers. You just need passion and the ability to transform a dream, with a business model, into something that makes sense. If you take one thing away from this article, it will be: To succeed in business, you have to have passion to do it You have to care about your project, your business, and your customers You need a not-for-profit environment You need to cut costs You need to be pragmatic and see the big picture You need to have and hold your end-user in your crosshairs and listen to him - not just in your own business, but in the businesses you help do business. How do you do this? Corporate jargon used to be the enemy, it didn't matter how cool-sounding or interesting it was - until you saw it was just

Cannon Jam is a puzzle game in pixel art style inspired by old arcade titles. The main goal of the game is to make as many platforms as possible for the ball to jump and go in the same direction. You can rotate the platforms by clicking on the white-colored part. You don't have any other tools in your hand. Select your playing path using arrows in the upper-left corner. The goal of the game is to make as many platforms as possible, but not through perfection. Clicking on an obstacle twice won't let you reposition it. If the ball is positioned correctly all the time, it should always end up jumping on the same part. Not everything will always follow the correct path. Sometimes you need to think more to find other paths, or use the cannon to reposition the platform and fire again. Right-click on the ball to move it to the other side. Select and change level with a button in the upper-right corner. Each level has 150 levels. Perfection is not the goal of the game. If you stop shooting when the ball is positioned correctly, the platforms won't appear. Please rate and rate the game too if you like it. Storyline: Today is the hot summer day. You have to save the world! The volcano is about to explode. Description Cannon Jam is a pixelart puzzle game in a classic arcade style.
