mv2.scl is an application that lets you listen to MIDI files for up to four instruments simultaneously. The 'mv2' part of this software consists of plugins for Windows and Linux. When installed, you'll find them in the 'mv2plugins' subdirectory inside the application's 'scripts' subfolder. From the command line, to begin use of mv2.scl, open a new.vimrc file in your text editor of choice. Add the mv2.scl script to your.vimrc file, and add the following line: scriptnames au BufEnter mv2.scl set filetype=cad If you want to keep using the traditional filetype, add the following line: scriptnames au BufEnter mv2.scl set filetype=cad Use the command :help mv2 to view a description of the available commands. If you want mv2.scl to handle.cad files, change the filetype to cad. If you want to disable mv2.scl from handling any filetypes, change the filetype to none. Use the :setq command, instead of :help, to view mv2.scl's configuration settings. See the mv2.scl script's help file to learn more about how to use mv2. Scripts are.vim version 5.1 Run 'mv2.scl' in your vim(or gvim) to start listening to your files. Learn more about the mv2.scl script at If you're using Ubuntu, you can install mv2.scl through the 'dotdeb.org' package management system with sudo apt-get install mv2-cad. For a list of available apt-get packages, see: You can also install mv2.scl through your package manager by using the 'unix-install' script included with mv2. We recommend that you do not use the 'dotdeb.org' package management system and instead use your package manager
