Since I don't want to be reliant on an internet connection, I've been working on getting a bit of an automation going for the various builds of the board. I've got the basics working, and I'm trying to incorporate more functionality by using scripts to control things like serial and serial-programming, flash and usb. It's going pretty well, so far. The most popular thing that I've been doing is turning the USB port into a bluetooth dongle. I've managed to make that work, and it's not bad for a first step. After I get the bluetooth working, I plan to get a touchscreen working, but I've been lazy about that so far. I want to try to have the build process automatically start up and perform a profile upload, download and install some apps onto the board. I also want to have the target environment can be configured via a web interface. I haven't yet figured out exactly how to do that, but if I do, we 79a2804d6b
