Whether I am downloading a file, or updating my iPhone; my Sony RX100 RF is connected and is my map pilot. Today I would like to address the issue of the "crack" or hack into a specific map. The Map pilots are the ones that send a signal to the transponders which, in turn, tell. Hacking this device should be a lot easier then hacking a full map full of secrets. The proprietary map. The issue isn't in the software. The effect of the number of donor oocytes on pregnancy rates after single-embryo transfer in older, infertile women. We studied the impact of the number of donor oocytes on pregnancy rates after the transfer of a single embryo in older, infertile women. A retrospective study was conducted. Data from 281 transfers were analyzed. The mean age of women was 37 years and they were receiving their first assisted reproduction treatment. They were undergoing oocyte retrieval in stimulated cycles. Retrieved oocytes were classified in four groups according to the number of oocytes retrieved. Donor oocyte transfers were analysed according to the number of oocytes in three subgroups: 0-3, 4-6 and  $\geq 7$ . The number of embryos transferred was  $1.6 \pm 0.6$  and the ongoing pregnancy rate was  $26.1 \pm 9.5\%$ . When the number of transferred embryos was 1 or 2, a significant difference in the ongoing pregnancy rate was observed between the three oocyte groups. In the oocyte  $\geq 7$  subgroup, the ongoing pregnancy rate was similar ( $17.1 \pm 6.1\%$ ) in all transfers. In conclusion, the number of donor oocytes should be taken into consideration when couples choose between donor oocyte cycles. Based on our data, we believe that in older, infertile women undergoing single embryo transfer, oocyte  $\geq 7$  have similar results as pregnancies resulting from oocyte transfer with a low number of embryos.
